Preface

This dictionary provides the user with the main vocabulary currently being used in British and American law. The areas covered include criminal, civil, commercial and international law, as well as interactions with the police and legal advisers, and the procedures of the courts and prisons. Common words used in reading or writing reports, articles or guidelines are also included.

The dictionary is designed for anyone who needs to check the meaning or pronunciation of legal terms, but especially for those who need some knowledge of legal terms in their work but who may not be legal professionals, or for those for whom English is an additional language. Each headword is explained in a clear, straightforward way. Pronunciations, uncommon plurals and uncommon verb forms are provided.

Many people have helped or advised on the compilation and checking of the dictionary in its various editions. In particular, thanks are due to Coral Hill, Senior Lecturer at the College of Law of England and Wales, for her helpful comments and advice on this fourth edition.

Pronunciation

The following symbols have been used to show the pronunciation of the main words in the dictionary.

Stress is indicated by a main stress mark (') and a secondary stress mark (,).

Commission of the European Community noun the main executive body of the EC, one of the four bodies which form the basis of the European Community, made up of members from each state

COMMENT: The Commission is formed of 20 members or Commissioners who are appointed by the governments of the Member States. The larger Member States (France, Germany, Italy, Spain and the UK) have two Commissioners each and the other smaller countries appoint one each. Each Commissioner is appointed for a five-year renewable term, and all the appointments end together, so the Commission is either changed or renewed every five years. Member States cannot dismiss the Commission, but can refuse to renew the term of appointment. The European Parliament can force the entire Commission to resign, but cannot dismiss an individual Commissioner. The European Court of Justice can force a Commissioner to retire on grounds of misconduct. The Commission is headed by the President of the European Commission, with two Vice-Presidents. The Commissioners are not supposed to be the representatives of their respective governments but must take the interests of the Community as a whole into account. Each commissioner has his or her own private office or Cabinet, headed by a Chef de Cabinet. The Commission has 23 departments called Directorates General, each headed by a Director-General, the Directorates General are subdivided into Directorates, and these are subdivided into Divisions. Each Directorate General is responsible to one of the Commissioners. The Commission represents all the Member States in negotiations with other parties, for example in trade negotiations with the USA. The Commission proposes laws for the European Community, and the Council of Ministers makes decisions accordingly. The Commission can make proposals regarding some legal matters and some matters concerning the internal security of Member States, but its main role is that of a watchdog, seeing that treaty obligations are carried out by Member States.

COMMENT: Originally the co-operation procedure was restricted to measures concerning the internal market (free movement of people within the union, no discrimination on grounds of nationality, harmonisation of health and safety in the workplace, etc.). It is now also used in connection with European transport policy, training, environmental issues, etc. The co-operation procedure implies that at the end of a discussion period the Council will adopt a common position which must then be approved by the European Parliament.

co-operative /kəʊ'ɒp(ə)rətɪv/ noun a business run by a group of workers who are the owners and who share the profits ○ industrial co-operative ○ to set up a workers' co-operative copyright /'kɒpɪraɪt/ noun an author's legal right to publish his or her own work and not to have it copied, which lasts 50 years after the author's death under the Berne Convention, or a similar right of an artist, film maker or musician □ work which is out of copyright work by a writer, etc., who has been dead for fifty years, and which anyone can publish □ work still in copyright work by a living writer, or by a writer who has not been dead for fifty years ■ verb to confirm the copyright of a written work by printing a copyright notice and publishing the work ■ adjective covered by the laws of copyright ○ It is illegal to take copies of a copyright work.

COMMENT: Copyright exists in original written works, in works of art and works of music; it covers films, broadcasts, recordings, etc.; it also covers the layout of books, newspapers and magazines. Copyright only exists if the work is created by a person who is qualified to hold a copyright, and is published in a country which is qualified to hold a copyright. There is no copyright in ideas, items of news, historical events, items of information, or in titles of artistic works. When a copyright is established, the owner of the copyright can copy his work himself, sell copies of it to the public, perform his work or exhibit it in public, broadcast his work, or adapt it in some way. No other person has the right to do any of these things. Copyright lasts for 50 years after the author's death according to the Berne Convention, and for 25 years according to the Universal Copyright Convention. In the USA, copyright is for 50 years after the death of an author for books published after January 1st, 1978. For books published before that date, the original copyright was for 28 years after the death of the author, and this can be extended for a further 28 year period up to a maximum of 75 years. In 1995, the European Union adopted a copyright term of 70 years after the death of the author. The copyright holder has the right to refuse or to grant permission to copy copyright material, though under the Paris agreement of 1971, the original publishers (representing the author or copyright holder) must, under certain circumstances, grant licences to reprint copyright material. The copyright notice has to include the symbol ©, the name of the copyright holder and the date of the copyright (which is usually the date of first publication). The notice must be printed in the book and usually appears on the reverse of the title page. A copyright notice is also printed on other forms of printed material such as posters.

Copyright Act /'kɒpɪ,raɪt ækt/ noun an Act of Parliament such as the Copyright Acts 1911, 1956 or 1988 making copyright legal and controlling the copying of copyright material

Council of Ministers /,kaʊns(ə)l əv 'mɪnɪstəz/ noun ♦ Council of the European Union

Council of the European Union /,kaʊns(ə)l əv ðə ɟʊərəʊpi:ən 'ju:njən/ noun one of the four bodies which form the basis of the European Community (NOTE: not to be confused with the European Council. Formerly the Council of the European Union was called the Council of Ministers and it is still sometimes called this.)

COMMENT: The Council does not have fixed members, but the Member States are each represented by the relevant government minister. The Council is headed by a President, and the Presidency rotates among the Member States in alphabetical order, each serving for a six-month period. In practice this means that each Member State can control the agenda of the Council, and therefore that of the European Union, for a period of six months, and can try to get as many of its proposals put into legislation as it can during that period. When meeting to discuss general matters the Council is formed of the foreign ministers of the Member States, but when it discusses specialised problems it is formed of the relevant government ministers: so when discussing agriculture, for example, it is formed of the Agriculture Ministers of the Member States.

Court of Appeal /kɔ:t əv ə'pi:l/, Court of Appeals /kɔ:t əv/ noun a civil or criminal court to which a person may go to ask for an award or a sentence to be changed. Also called Appeal Court

COMMENT: In the majority of cases in English law, decisions of lower courts and of the High Court can be appealed to the Court of Appeal. The Court of Appeal is divided into the Civil Division and the Criminal Division. The Civil Division hears appeals from the County Court and the High Court; the Criminal Division hears appeals from the Crown Court. From the Court of Appeal, appeal lies to the House of Lords. When the remedies available under English law are exhausted, it is in some cases possible to appeal to the European Court of Justice. For many countries, especially Commonwealth countries, appeals from the highest court of these countries may be heard by the Privy Council.

court officer /,kɔ:t 'ɔ:fɪsəl/ noun a member of the staff of a court, especially a County Court court of first instance /,kɔ:t əv fɜ:st 'ɪnstəns/ noun a court where a case is heard first COMMENT: Under English law, the only basis of divorce is the irretrievable breakdown of marriage. This is proved by one of five grounds: (a) adultery; (b) unreasonable behaviour; (c) one of the parties has deserted the other for a period of two years; (d) the parties have lived apart for two years and agree to a divorce; (e) the parties have lived apart for five years. In the context of divorce proceedings the court has wide powers to make orders regarding residence and contact orders for children, and ancillary relief. Divorce proceedings are normally dealt with by the County Court, or in London at the Divorce Registry. Where divorce proceedings are defended, they are transferred to the High Court, but this is rare and most divorce cases are now conducted by what is called the 'special procedure'.

COMMENT: In Britain, a Parliament can only last for a maximum of five years, and a dissolution is usually called by the Prime Minister before the end of that period. The Lord Chancellor then issues a writ for the election of MPs. All British subjects (including Commonwealth and Irish citizens), are eligible to vote in British elections provided they are on the electoral register, are over 18 years of age, are sane, are not members of the House of Lords and are not serving prison sentences for serious crime. In the USA, members of the House of Representatives are elected for a two-year period. Senators are elected for six-year terms, one third of the Senate being elected every two years. The President of the USA is elected by an electoral college made up of people elected by voters in each of the states of the USA. Each state elects the same number of electors to the electoral college as it has Congressmen, plus two. This guarantees that the college is broadly representative of voters across the country. The presidential candidate with an overall majority in the college is elected president. A presidential term of office is four years, and a president can stand for re-election once.

Also called Court of Justice of the European Communities

COMMENT: The ECJ has 15 judges and 8 Advocates General; these are appointed by the governments of Member States for a period of six years. The judges come from all the Member States, and bring with them the legal traditions of each state. The court can either meet as a full court, or in chambers where only two or three judges are present. The court normally conducts its business in French, though if an action is brought before the court by or against a Member State, that Member State can choose the language in which the case will be heard. The Court can hear actions against institutions, actions brought either by the Commission or by a Member State against another Member State. The Court also acts as Court of Appeal for appeals from the Court of First Instance. The court also interprets legislation and as such acts in a semi-legislative capacity.

SUPPLEMENTS

Legislative procedure in the UK

Green Paper Stage	a paper discussing the issues surrounding the proposed bill (optional)
White Paper Stage	a paper stating current policy on the issues surrounding the proposed bill (optional)
Draft Bill Stage	the wording of the Bill is drafted
First Reading	the Bill is presented formally in Parliament as a reading with no debate or decision
Second Reading	the Bill is read again to the House and a debate takes place
Committee stage	a standing committee (a committee of about 18 house members, more for long or complicated bills) debates whether each clause and schedule of the Bill should be kept or dropped
Report Stage	the whole house looks at the amendments proposed by the standing committee and propose and debate any of their own
Third Reading Stage	the whole redrafted Bill is read once more in the House and briefly discussed
Lords Approval Stage	the House of Lords takes the Bill and goes through the same procedure from First to Third Reading, debating any amendments. The Lords and Commons agree on a final text
Royal Assent Stage	royal approval is given and the Bill becomes a statute (Act of Parliament)

Important Note: The Parliament Act

The entire process must take place in one Session of Parliament, meaning that a Bill may not be passed purely because it has run out of time. This means that the House of Lords may 'kill' a Bill they don't wish to pass (for example the Hunting Bill 2002) by taking an overly long time to discuss it. In this case the Parliament Act means that the Bill can be reintroduced and passed in the following Session without the approval of the Lords, with the following conditions:

1. The Lords had enough time to debate it before the end of the session (at least one month).
2. The wording of the Bill hasn't changed since the last presentation.
3. One year has passed since the Bill was given its Second Reading in the Commons.

Private Members' Bills go through the same procedure from First Reading. However, there is intense competition for the little Parliamentary time available for considering these. Unless the Bill is completely uncontroversial it is likely to be formally objected to at some stage and therefore dropped; otherwise it is more or less 'noddled through' without much debate.

Legislative procedure in the European Union

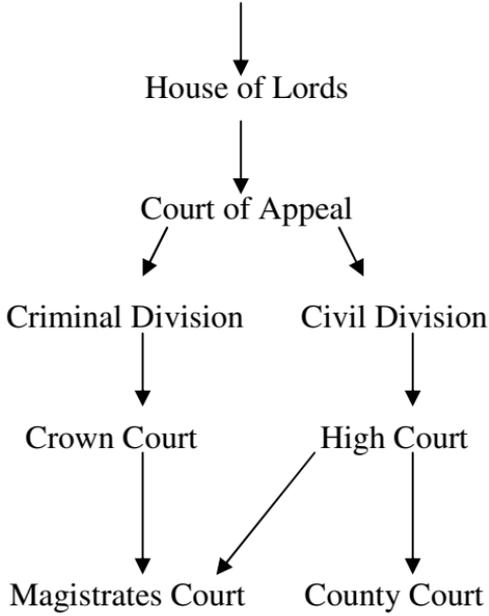

Proposal	the European Commission drafts the text of a Bill
First Reading	the European Parliament submits the Bill to a committee reading and a report is prepared with suggested amendments
Common Position	the European Council either accepts the amended Bill or suggests its own amendments (NB this is the first point at which the Bill can be passed)
Recommendation	a further committee assessment is undertaken of the Council's proposed amendments at Parliament and a recommendation given
Second Reading	Parliament debates the committee's report and vote by absolute majority whether to accept the Council's amendments and on further amendments of their own
Amended proposal	the Commission looks at Parliament's second reading decisions and drafts an amended proposal for the Council, who vote whether to accept or modify it (this is the second point at which the Bill can be passed)
Conciliation committee	a committee of members from both the Council and Parliament meet to agree on a joint text
Third Reading	Parliament meets to finally discuss whether to adopt the Bill as law. If no mutual agreement can be reached the Bill will lapse.

Legislative procedure in the US

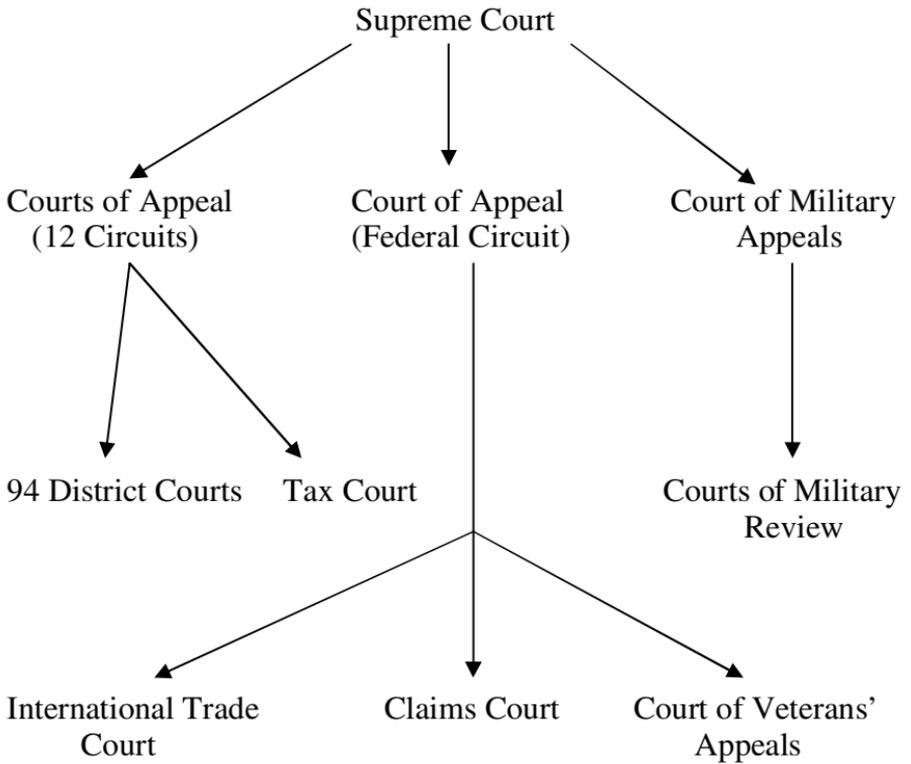

Introduction	the draft Bill is submitted to the House without reading or debate (any time while the House is in session)
Referral to Committee	the Bill is published and assigned an identification number, then sent to the appropriate committee (of 19) according to its subject
Committee Action 1	relevant offices and departments give their input, reports are prepared on the validity of the Bill and committee meetings are held
Committee Action 2	a public hearing may be held before a subcommittee with the questioning of witnesses and the attendance of interested parties
Markup	the subcommittee prepares a report on the hearing with any relevant amendments to the Bill
Final Committee Action	the full committee reads and amends the Bill and either reports it back favourably to the House, tables it or discharges it (thereby preventing it from progressing any further), or reports it back without recommendation (rare)
House Floor Consideration	the committee report is debated in the House and any further amendments voted on
Resolving Differences	the Bill is sent to the Senate for house floor consideration and an identical version is agreed on by both bodies, possibly with the help of a mediating committee
Final Step	the Bill is approved (signed) by the President and becomes a Law
